

From continuity to outcomes.

Building on a successful Diwali launch — whose festive packages were retained as permanent offerings — into a 2026 plan to prove readiness for the Product Manager role.

Keeping the lights on.

My current role centers on continuity — the day-to-day work that keeps Quinn's existing book of business healthy. It's the foundation, but it's not the ceiling.

THE LIMITATION

Continuity work is reactive by design — it preserves what exists. A PM role is proactive: it builds what's next.

Customer retention

Ensuring existing Quinn users stay engaged and renew.

Organic onboarding

Supporting new customers who sign up on their own.

App continuity

Maintaining a smooth, reliable client experience.

The Product Manager bar.

Four expectations define the role — each one a shift from "keeping things working" to "making things happen."

Define and execute GTM

Own the strategy from positioning through launch — not just support it.

Build and launch features

Take features from concept to live, with measurable outcomes attached.

Drive adoption and impact

Move the metrics that matter — usage, conversion, retention.

Own outcomes, not tasks

Commit to deadlines and goals, and be accountable for the result.

Outcomes, not activities.

Three numbers anchor this plan. They're concrete, measurable, and owned end-to-end. If they move, the case is made.

Four workstreams, one proof.

Each workstream targets a different lever: revenue, the Lite app, the main app, and product. Together they cover the full PM motion.

A

Sales & Revenue

Revive dropped accounts and re-engage cold leads to add
~$1.5K MRR from fixed plans.

REVENUE

B

Lite App Strategy

Reach Lite customers via Mantle with the retained festive packages — now a permanent +2–3K-view Lite offering.

ADOPTION

C

Main App Strategy

WhatsApp + bulk email to showcase new templates and revive inactive users on the main app.

ENGAGEMENT

D

Product Outcomes

Launch 3D Cards, Stacked Cards, Video Cards. Collect feedback from top 10 clients and measure uplift.

PRODUCT

Bring back what's been left behind.

The fastest path to MRR isn't new logos — it's the dropped accounts and cold leads that already know Quinn. They're warm, contextually relevant, and underserved.

THE PLAYBOOK

- Segment dropped accounts by churn reason and last plan
- Personalised re-engagement for high-value cold leads
- Move fixed-plan revivals first — they convert faster
- Track each touch in a single weekly performance view

THE TARGET

+$1.5K

MRR added in 2026

FROM WHERE

Fixed-plan revivals from dropped accounts — predictable, recurring, and lower-effort than net-new acquisition.

Two apps, two playbooks.

Lite and main app users behave differently. Each gets a distribution motion built around how they already engage.

Retained packages

LITE APP

After a successful Diwali launch, the festive plans were retained as a permanent Lite offering — distinctive in design and pricing. Mantle outreach extends the reach to every Lite customer.

- Mantle outreach to all Lite customers
- Retained package: +2–3K bonus views
- Goal: lift adoption, reduce churn

Templates as the hook

MAIN APP

Use new templates as the conversation opener. WhatsApp for warmth, bulk email for reach — bring inactive merchants back into the product.

- WhatsApp showcasing new templates
- Bulk email featuring retained packages
- Re-engage inactive main-app users

Ship, listen, measure.

The PM signal lives here: a launch, a feedback loop, and a number that proves the launch mattered.

01

Build on the launch

3D Cards, Stacked Cards, and Video Cards launched at Diwali — and were retained for their distinct design value.

02

Listen to the top 10

Structured feedback from the highest-value clients on what works and what doesn't.

03

Measure the uplift

Engagement and conversion deltas from the new features — owned, reported, defended.

Four weeks to execute, one quarter to prove it.

The scorecard.

Four metrics. Each one independently verifiable. If three of four land, the case is strong; if all four land, the case is closed.

Execution is the argument.

This plan isn't a proposal — it's a contract. Numbers committed to, deadlines owned, and outcomes that will be measured at quarter-end.
